1. INTRODUCTION.

In 2007, the Samoa Qualifications Authority (SQA) executed an initial study on employment opportunities available to those that exit Post School Education and Training (PSET) Institutions in Samoa, so as to identify which occupation groups as classified under the International Labour Organisation (ILO) Classification of Occupation List (Annex 1) were of the highest demand in the labour market both nationally and internationally during 2006 – 2007.

This report entails the continuation of this study into the period 2008 - 2009 with the following objectives:

- To find out what types of employment opportunities that were available to PSET leavers during 2008-2009;
- 2) To identify trends in job opportunities available to PSET leavers since 2006.

SQA is mandated under the SQA Act 2010 to co-ordinate and strengthen Post School Education and Training (PSET) so as to better focus the Post School Education and Training (PSET) sector on national development goals and promote and develop articulation among programmes. It is envisaged that findings from these two studies will assist not only SQA in (amongst other things) the appropriation of sound advice to PSET Providers, but PSET Providers themselves, in terms of the types of programmes they should offer to cater for the labour market demands both nationally and internationally.

2. STUDY METHOD.

Data collection for this study was done entirely through desk research with the main sources for job vacancies advertised during 2008 and 2009 being the local newspapers (Samoa Observer and Newsline), the Samoa Public Service Commission (PSC) Official Circulars and the Internet.

Information recorded for each job vacancy advertised included the Advertisement Date, Employer, Position Advertised, Occupation Group as Classified under the International Labour Organisation (ILO) Classification of Occupation List and the Number of Vacancies listed per Job Opening advertised. Reference numbers at the bottom of each newspaper vacancy advertisement was recorded to avoid duplication should the same vacancy appear in subsequent publications.

Data from newspapers was then segregated according to Employer Type: Private, Government, Government Corporations, PSET Providers, Non Governmental Organisations (NGOs), Church Organisations and Schools, and Diplomatic and International Organisations. For the overseas vacancies obtained via the internet, vacancies were sorted according to country of origin.

Data entry was initiated in March 2010 however due to an unforeseen change in staff numbers for the responsible Division conducting the research, the deadline for the study was extended. The extension was also justified as the Division had to obtain qualifications and work experience requirements for each job vacancy to inform the development of the careers advisory services under the Qualifications Division of SQA.

Verification and refining of data to ensure that each vacancy was counted only once was done when the study resumed. The final stage included the analysis of all the information gathered on national and international vacancies advertised during 2008 and 2009.

One of the constraints faced by the Division during the data collection process was accessing international employment opportunities information for the period of interest as most of the websites visited did not keep archives of the information sought.

Information from the Ministry of Commerce, Industry and Labour (MCIL) on labour markets and job seekers was not considered during this study as the data submitted by MCIL was not within the desired timeframe.

3. FINDINGS.

For ease of reference, analysis of local and international employment data are presented separately in this report.

3.1 LOCAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES.

Local employment opportunities data was obtained from local newspapers as well as from the PSC Official Circulars published during the calendar years 2008 and 2009. The table below summarises the total number of local vacancies advertised during 2008 and 2009, by ILO Occupation Group by data source.

Table 1 illustrates that a minimum total of 2674 local job vacancies were advertised in the local newspapers and the PSC Official Circulars in 2008 and 2009. There was also a total of fourty three (43) different job opportunities advertised with indefinite or "open" number of positions.

The number of total vacancies advertised in 2009 was slightly higher than in 2008. The "Professionals" Group recorded the highest number of vacancies for both years. However, the second most popular Occupation Group shifted from the "Clerks" in 2008 to the "Technicians & Associated Professionals" in 2009. Job opportunities under the "Skilled Agricultural & Fisheries Workers" were the least demanded for jobs during both years. The "Legislators, Senior Officials & Managers" Occupation Group recorded the least change in numbers during the same two year period.

Compared to data collected during the 2007 study, results in Table 1 indicate a shift from the "Technicians & Associated Professionals" Group as being the most demanded types of occupations in the local labour market to the "Professionals" Group. The second most demanded occupations have also changed from the "Professionals" to the "Clerks" Group. This could be indicative of either a change in labour market demand for a more skilled workforce than previously implied or it could be indicative of areas of skills shortages in the local labour sector.

3.1.2 Public Service Vacancies

The PSC Official Circular advertises vacancies in the public service sector as well as overseas vacancies in International and Regional Organisations with local affiliations.

As illustrated in the following tables, there was a slight increase in the number of local vacancies advertised in 2009 compared to 2008. The majority of advertised vacant positions came under the "Professionals" Group of the ILO Classification of Occupations List. The second most demanded types of occupations within the public sector however changed from "Clerks" in 2008 to "Technical & Associated Professionals" in 2009.

The Ministry of Education, Sports and Culture (MESC) dominated both years in terms of the number of vacancies listed in the Circulars. A dramatic increase in the number of job openings was also recorded for the National Health Services (NHS) in 2009 compared to the previous year. This expansion in employment opportunities for both of these Organisations may have been the direct result of the Public Sector Reforms.

There was a very limited demand from the public service sector for low-skilled workers (Occupation Groups 5 to Group 9) in 2008 and 2009.

3.1.3 Newspaper Vacancies

Analysis of the newspaper vacancies advertised during 2008 and 2009 reveal a slight increase in the total number of vacancies during the latter year. The highest number of job openings came from Government Corporations.

Table 4 below shows that almost all of the employer groups (except Diplomatic and International Organisations) had the highest number of vacancies under the "Professionals" Group. Employment opportunities under the "Clerks" and "Technicians & Associated Professionals" Group were of the highest demand from the Private Sector, relative to other employer groups.

Total number of vacant positions under the "Legislators, Senior Officials & Managers" Group remained constant during the two years. A relatively higher number of occupations under Groups 5 to 9 were advertised by Corporations and the Private Sector during 2008 and 2009 in the newspapers compared to the Public Service Sector ads in the Circulars.

Compared to newspaper vacancies advertised in 2006, recent data suggests that the number of local employment opportunities available to PSET leavers is increasing. Moreover, demand for highly skilled personnel to fulfill Groups 1 and 2 of the ILO Classification of Occupations List has superseded demand for a semi-skilled workforce under the "Technicians & Associated Professionals" Group which dominated newspaper advertisements five years ago.

Newspaper advertisements for local employment opportunities under ILO Occupation Groups 5 to 9 have also decreased since 2006. This either supports the notion that the labour market demand has shifted towards a more highly skilled workforce or it could indicate patterns of labour skills shortages in Samoa.

3.2 OVERSEAS EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES.

Data on employment opportunities available to PSET leavers was obtained from the internet and the PSC Official Circulars.

Overseas vacancies advertised via the PSC Official Circulars are generally limited to occupations under the "Legislators, Senior Officials & Managers" Group due to the nature of occupations available in Regional and International Organisations. Majority of websites visited for overseas vacancies advertised during 2008 and 2009 did not keep archives of such information hence the limited number of vacancies presented in the table above.

For the internet acquired vacancies, Table 5 above illustrates a relatively higher number of overseas employment opportunities under the "Professionals" Group advertised during 2008 and 2009. Data also suggests a high demand for semi skilled personnel to occupy employment positions under the "Service, Shop and Market Sales Workers" Group in overseas countries.

Vacancies 2 4 1 1 2 1 2 1 1 2 When compared to data obtained during the first study, results in table above implies a change in demand from New Zealand employers for more skilled personnel to occupy positions under Occupation Groups 1 and 2 rather than semi skilled workers.

Limited data on job vacancies advertised during 2008 and 2009 in Australia indicates a higher demand for skilled personnel to fulfill jobs under the "Professionals" Group. Employment opportunities under Group 2 and 7 were the most demanded for jobs in Australia during 2007.

In 2009, demand for semi-skilled people to occupy jobs under Groups 5 and 7 was the highest for employers in American Samoa. Data gathered during the 2007 study indicates similar demand in America Samoa's labour market five years ago.

4. STUDY LIMITATIONS.

The ILO Occupations Classification List used to categorize job vacancies presented in this report provides some guidance of the types of jobs belonging under each Occupation Group, however not all jobs are listed. Personal judgement was hence used where distinctions could not be made. This means a repeat of this study may generate different results than what is presented here.

The only data source on local job vacancies used in the 2007 study was the local newspapers. This second study however, has incorporated data from PSC Official Circulars. The differences reported between occupation demands five years ago and more recently in 2008 and 2009 therefore may be the result of limited data rather than observed truth.

For overseas vacancies, the data presented in this report is limited to information available via certain websites. This limits the validity of findings from this study and their use to generalize assumptions on labour market situations in the countries implicated.

Findings on local job opportunities are also limited due to data sources used, that is this study does not take into account for instance opportunities in the health, education and other sectors that have institutional arrangements with PSET Providers whereby new graduates are recruited every year without them having to go through the conventional recruitment and selection process.

5. CONCLUSIONS.

This second study into national and international employment opportunities available to PSET leavers during 2008 and 2009 has revealed that:

♣ A total of 1240 local job vacancies were advertised in 2008 and 1434 during 2009 through local newspapers and the PSC Official Circulars. Job openings advertised in the newspapers have increased compared to data gathered during the 2007 study.

- ♣ The most demanded for local occupations during 2008 and 2009 were of the "Professionals" Group. Occupation types under the "Technicians & Associated Professionals" Group were the most demanded for jobs in the local labour market during 2006 2007.
- ♣ The second most popular Occupation Group also shifted from "Professionals" in 2006 to "Clerks" during 2008 – 2009. These changes in local job vacancies are either indicative of a change in demand from employers for a more skilled workforce or it could be indicative of patterns of skill shortages in Samoa.
- Overseas vacancies advertised during 2008 and 2009 indicate an increase in the number of job openings under the "Professionals" Group for both New Zealand and Australia.
- ♣ High demand for semi-skilled workers from employers in American Samoa has not changed since 2006.

6. RECOMMENDATIONS.

- a) Given SQA's mandated role to provide careers advisory services it is recommended that this study be continued under the Qualifications Divisions responsible for the Careers Advisory Services, whereby a more strategic approach to gathering information on the labour market sector in terms of the number and types of employers, the types of occupations that exist in Samoa as well as the qualifications, skills and competencies requirements associated with each occupation, is adopted. The Qualifications Division can liaise with SBS, MCIL, PSC and other relevant organizations on how this information can be collected and shared on a periodic basis.
- b) Equally important is the need to have information on areas of skills shortages in Samoa's labour market. Given recent developments with the Pacific Island Countries Trade Agreement (PICTA) Temporary Movement of Natural Persons (TMNP) Scheme, it is essential that areas of skills shortage are known so that enough people are educated and trained with the relevant skills to meet local needs before these are exported to meet occupation demands in overseas countries. PSET Providers both formal and non-formal will play an active role in the provision of relevant programmes and trainings to address skills shortages in the local labour market if these are known from time to time. SQA can pursue this issue further with MCIL through their proposed c) Information on the number and types of vacancies advertised in local media provides a good indication of occupation demands from employers. It is in the interest of Government through the relevant organization (SBS or MCIL) to ensure these types of information are collated and published on a periodic basis for planning, policy formulation and research purposes.

Definitional notes:

Senior government officials within minor group 111 (Legislators and senior government officials) should be restricted to public service officials who occupy the somewhat limited number of senior managerial positions within the public service at central, regional and local levels. Those managing government owned or controlled industrial enterprises, public utilities etc. should be classified to minor groups 121 (Directors and chief executives), 122 (Production and operation managers) or 123 (Other managers) as appropriate. Examples of occupational titles associated with minor group 111 are:

Permanent secretary
Assistant permanent secretary
Head of department
Director of ministry
Mayor
Senior administrator, intergovernmental agency
Diplomatic representative

This sub-major group includes occupations whose main tasks require a high level of professional knowledge and experience in the physical, mathematical and engineering sciences (ILO, 1990; p.47).

- 1. This category should include public service officials who state that their main professional activity is associated with statistical information processing and analysis or the direct supervision of others involved in such tasks.
- 2. If the job title does not permit a clear distinction, additional information on level of relevant qualifications, or description of tasks may be used to allocate occupations to either minor group 213 or minor group 312 (Computer associate professionals).

Life science and health professionals conduct research, improve or develop concepts, theories and operational methods, or apply scientific knowledge relating to fields such as biology, zoology, botany, ecology, physiology, biochemistry, microbiology, pharmacology, agronomy and medicine (ILO, 1990; p.59).

No explicit changes are proposed for this sub-major group. However, it should be noted that strict application of the principle that this sub-major group be restricted to ISCO skill level 4 (education commensurate with a university degree or equivalent) may require reference to information on qualification. This is particularly the case with minor group 223 (Nursing and Midwifery professionals), where particular nursing specialisms may require such high level qualifications.

Definitional notes:

Teaching professionals teach the theory and practice of one or more disciplines at different educational levels, conduct research and improve or develop concepts, theories and operational methods pertaining to their particular discipline, and prepare scholarly papers and books (ILO 1990; p.65).

Allocation of occupations to minor groups 233 (Primary and pre-primary education teaching professionals) and 234 (Special education teaching professionals) as opposed to minor groups 331 (Primary education teaching associate professionals), 332 (Pre-primary education teaching associate professionals) and 333 (Special education teaching associate professionals) is usually performed for the entire group rather than for any part of it (ie. primary teachers are allocated either to 233 or 331, depending upon national education and training requirements). Harmonisation of national education and training requirements will eventually remove such differences. Meanwhile, it is proposed that countries indicate clearly the basis for their allocation of primary, pre-primary or special education teaching occupations to minor groups 233/234 or 331/332/333.

Headteachers are classified to unit group 1229.

Depending upon the specific tasks and degree of responsibility, as well as on the national educational and training requirements, it may be appropriate to classify some of the occupations identified here into sub-major group 34 (Other associate professionals) (ILO, 1990; p.72).

- 1. This category should include public service officials who state that their main professional activity is associated with economic analysis or the supervision of others involved in such tasks.
- 2. This category is intended to include persons who require skills at the fourth ISCO skill level (university education or equivalent). Countries should indicate clearly the basis of their allocation of occupations to this minor group as opposed to minor group 347 (Artistic, entertainment and sports associate professionals).
- 3. This is a new minor group, designed explicitly for the classification of occupations in which the primary tasks consist of general administrative functions within the public service and for which national education and training requirements stipulate a university education or equivalent. Occupations classified to this category exclude the most senior general administrative grades within the public service (classified to minor group 111 Legislators and senior government officials).

Technicians and associate professionals perform mostly technical and related tasks connected with research and the application of scientific and artistic concepts and operational methods, and government or business regulations, and teach at certain educational levels. Most occupations in this group require skills at the third ISCO level (education which begins at the age of 17 or 18 years and leads to an award not equivalent to a first university degree) (ILO, 1990; p.3 & 85).

- 1. If the job title and associated information on activities does not permit a clear distinction, additional information on a level of relevant qualifications or description of tasks may be used to allocate occupations to either minor group 312 (Computer associate professionals) or minor group 213 (computing professionals).
- 2. Unit groups 3121, 3122 and 3123 may be merged and described as unit group 3120 (Computer associate professionals, nothing otherwise specified).

Other associate professionals perform technical tasks connected with the practical application of knowledge relating to finance and sales, business enterprise administration, bookkeeping, legal, statistical and other services, government activities relating to customs, travel, tax, welfare, job placement, licensing, the police force, as well as with social work, entertainment, sport and religion (ILO, 1990; p.113).

1. This unit group consist of occupations which support professional and/or managerial staff in an administrative capacity. The range of tasks/responsibilities wil be wider than those ascribed to jobs classified in unit group 4115 (secretaries). Included in this unit group should be associate professional occupations within the public service which are not specialist public service occupations (eg, customs, tax, social benefit, licensing officials - these would be allocated to minor group 344), but which consist primarily of administrative functions and for which the skills level is defined at the ISCO third level.

This is particularly relevant to the occupations classified into minor group 346, (Social work associate professionals) (ILO, 1990; p.113).

1. Unit group 3449 should be restricted to those occupations which are specific to the public service sector, and which have no direct parallel outside the public service. Examples of occupations classified to this category include:

Clerks record, store, compute and retrieve information, perform a number of clerical duties especially in connection with money-handling operations, travel arrangements, request for information and appointments. Most occupations in this group require skills at the second ISCO level (an education level which begins at the age of 14 or 15 and lasts about three years) (ILO, 1990; p.131).

- 1. Occupations describing clerical tasks but failing to distinguish between office clerks and customer services clerks should be allocated to a unit group 4000 (clerks, nothing otherwise specified).
- 2. Where it is clear that the clerical duties involve office work, not customer service activities, yet classification to minor groups 411-414 is not possible, either because these involve a wide range of office activities or because specific information on the nature of these activities is not available, classification is to minor group 419 (Other office clerks).

	422	Client information clerks 4221 Travel agency and related clerks 4222 Receptionists and information clerks 4223 Telephone switchboard operators

Definitional notes:

Customer services clerks deal directly with clients in connections with money-handling operations, travel arrangements, requests for information, appointments and by operating telehone switchboards (ILO, 1990; p.139).

Allocation of clerks between sub-major groups 41 (Office clerks) and 42 (Customer services clerks) will be performed with reference to job titles and/or job descriptions. Specific job titles/descriptions which indicate direct customer service interaction (eg. counter clerk, receptionist, telephonist) will result in classification within sub-major group 42 (Customer services clerks). In cases where information is less specific (eg. bank clerk), classification should be to sub-major group 41 (Office clerks).

Definitional notes:

Service workers and shop and market sales workers provide personal and protective services related to travel, housekeeping, personal care, or protection against fire, unlawful acts, or they pose as models for artistic creation and display, or demonstrate and sell goods in wholesale or retail shops and similar establishments, as at well as stalls and on markets. Most occupations in this major group require skills at the second ISCO level (ILO, 1990; p.143).

Minor group 515 (Astrologers, fortune tellers and related workers) in ISCO-88 is not separately identified; such occupations should be classified to unit group 5149 (Other personal services workers not elsewhere classified).

1. Personal care and related workers perform simple tasks to assist medical, nursing, midwifery and dental professionals or associate professionals in their dutires. They may also attend to the personal needs and provide care for persons in need of such care. Where no distinction can be made between 'institution-based' care (unit group 5132) and 'home-based' care (unit group 5133), all such personal care workers should be allocated to unit group 5130 (Personal care and related workers, nothing otherwise specified).

Definitional notes:

Sub-major group 61 (Skilled agricultural and fishery workers) consists of those occupations which require skills at the second ISCO skill level (education which begins at the age of 14 or 15 and lasts about three years - a period of on-the-job training may be necessary, which may supplement or replace the formal education) (ILO, 1990; p.157 & 3).

Unit groups 6111 and 6112 within minor group 611 (Market gardeners and crop growers) and unit groups 6121 and 6122 within minor group 612 (Animal producers and related workers) are identified in terms of the main agricultural product. Unit group 6129 (Animal producers and related workers not elsewhere classified) is reserved for mixed animal producers, apiarists and sericulturists.

No skilled agricultural occupations within the European Community are classified to sub-major group 62 (Subsistence agricultural and fishery workers).

1. Occupations classified to these unit groups may involve some managerial responsibilities, especially where a person works on their own account, with or without employees or family assistance. If, however, the main activity is described in terms of the relevant skilled trade, classification is to these categories.

No changes are proposed for the above unit groups.

Plant and machine operators and assemblers operate and monitor industrial and agricultural machinery and equipment on the spot or by remote control, drive and operate trains, motor vehicles and mobile machinery and equipment, or assemble products from component parts according to strict specifications and procedures.

The work mainly calls for experience with, and an understanding of, industrial and agricultural machinery and equipment as well as an ability to cope with machine-paced operations and to adapt to technological innovations. Most occupations in the major group require skills at the second ISCO level (ILO, 1990; p.211).

1. 'Stationary plant' should be interpreted primarily as 'process plant'. Operative occupations classified to sub-major group 81 (Stationary plant and related operators) involve process control operations, usually to a strictly defined set of procedures.

Automated assembly line operators are not separately distinguished from assembling occupations in minor group 828 (Assemblers).

	916	Garbage 9161 9162	collectors and related labourers Garbage collectors Sweepers and related labourers

Definitional notes:

Elementary occupations consist mainly of simple and routine tasks which mainly require the use of hand-held tools and often some physical effort. Most occupations in this major group require skills at the first ISCO skill level (a primary education which generally begins at the age of 5, 6 or 7 and lasts about 5 years) (ILO, 1990; p.249 & 2).

Strict application of the ISCO skill level to occupations in this major group is inappropriate, given that basic education provision always exceeds this level. A more appropriate test may be the length of any associated vocational training. Typically, such training will consist primarily of induction training, lasting only a matter of weeks.

- 1. Where there is insufficient information to classify labouring occupations to sub-major group 91 (Sales and services elementary occupations), sub-major group 92 (Agricultural, fishery and related workers) or sub-major group 93 (Labourers in mining, construction, manufacturing or transport), classification is to a unit group 9000 (Elementary occupations, nothing otherwise specified).
- 2. Unit group 9112 (Street vendors, non-food products) is not separately identified from unit group 9111 (Street vendors).
